Dunstanburgh Castle Golf Course was established, in 1900, as an attraction for visitors to the Dunstanburgh Castle Hotel and it has remained a proprietary course ever since. In first section of this book, the current owner, Dr Peter Gilbert, outlines its history and traces inter-related influences of owners, members and visitors in shaping its character.

In the next section, two contributors remember formative, boyhood hours spent on the course. William Sutherland, a previous owner, draws poetically on memories of the scenery and wildlife he enjoyed as he played and worked on the course. Tommy Foggett then describes the origins of the men's club in the 1940s, recalling how his father encouraged local residents to play on a subscription basis.

In the third section, long-term members, Eric Wealleans and Judy Robson, summarise the history of the men's and ladies' clubs.

One of the earliest photographs of the course shows Robert and Gertrude Bell, of Seahouses, putting on a green on what is now the seventh fairway. Some time later Mr Bell was being treated in a sanatorium in Switzerland and the friend who had taken the photograph sent it as a post card on 2nd August, 1905.
